Kathryn Hendrick Biography

Kathryn Hendrick is a health care communications specialist who has worked in a number of academic health centres and research institutes across Canada. Through the personal experience of caring for her father who had over eighteen bouts of sepsis before his death, Kathryn became an advocate for improved sepsis management through her volunteer role as the Communications Director for the Global Sepsis Alliance, and as a Board member for the Canadian Sepsis Foundation. Her advocacy efforts have been greatly informed through her work as a patient representative with Sepsis Canada and several research initiatives through the Canadian Critical Care Trials Group.
